WHAT HAPPENS IN THE MONTH OF SEPTEMBER?

European Day of Languages

Celebrated on 26 September, the European Day of Languages (EDL) is a means of promoting awareness among the general public of the importance of language learning and protecting the linguistic heritage.

The first European Day of Languages took place on 26 September 2001 and was a flagship event of the European Year of Languages 2001 campaign organised jointly with the European Union. Millions of people in 45 member states took part. It was such a success that in order to satisfy the expectations of many partners, the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe decided, in late 2001, to make this day an annual event to be celebrated on 26 September. The objectives of the European Day of Languages are similar to those of the 2001 campaign:

1. Celebrating linguistic diversity in Europe, the plurilingualism of its citizens and lifelong language learning;
2. Improving awareness of Europe's linguistic heritage and promoting its rich diversity by encouraging openness to different languages and cultures;
3. Motivating European citizens to develop plurilingualism (the ability to use different languages, to whatever standard) to achieve a degree of proficiency in a number of languages, including those less widely used or taught;
4. Encouraging and supporting lifelong language learning for personal development.
